Discussion:

All IFloodS instrumentation is essentially green. Today some precipitation is expected in the form of showers and/or thunderstorms, particularly in the afternoon. However, the best chance for heavy rain and/or severe weather is east of our domain, across the Mississippi River. Based on the forecast, a down period has been tentatively set for 7 am Sunday through 7 am Monday. After the Saturday morning telecon, this period will be finalized, which may include extension of its duration.
